ON THE INTERNET. Areas that you may be interested in checking out for amateur radio

MIT – Yale – Harvard University's offer free open courses on the Internet.

You can go to Google and search for MIT open courseware.

You have a linked list of all these courses by departments. If you are in to learning or just being curious about areas that you thought about taking courses. I understand that many other colleges and universities offer similar open courseware as well.

For those of you who have iTunes you can go to the iTunes & similar programs for "courseware and many of these will have videos of the lectures and classes that were videotaped.

If you're interested in and about the technology personal computer software and hardware you can go to the Internet and look for Leo Laporte he has a daily video test on twit live. Http://live.twit.tv.

This live video can be viewed every day from noon until 7:30 PM Central time. During the time of live broadcast, he invites viewers to call in and ask questions. Leo's phone number is listed as 1- 800-88 ask Leo. Leo has been around for a number of years and is quite experienced in this technology. I am still learning things from his show along with all the good hints.

Leo also provides podcast that you can listen to daily. They cover all kinds of operating systems for PC's. Plus all kinds of application software for laptops and desktops etc. He will typically have experts of numerous areas of the PC field joining him.

Here is another fellow, Paul Thurrott , <http://www.winsupersite.com> . Paul had a daily news, supersonic law, Windows secrets of super site mailbag. Tell all about good and the bad of Windows operating systems.

http://www.howcast.com/videos/most\_recent/howcast\_studios/6 another good place to check out. They cover allot of things here too. Pretty interesting.
